三、阅读理解(24分)

(A)

Lots of teenagers think that it is difficult to set and reach goals. What about you? If your answer is yes, don't feel sad. The following tips can help you.

Clear goals work best. "I'm going to ride my bike to school every day instead of sitting in my father's car" is a much more feasible goal than "I'm going to do more for the environment (环境)". And it is easier to stick to.

It takes some time for a change to turn into a habit. It may take a few months before a change, like getting up half an hour earlier to exercise turns into a habit. That's because your brain needs some time to get used to the idea that the new thing you're doing is part of your life.

Repeating goals helps you stick to them. Saying out your goals loudly each morning helps you tell yourself what you want and what you're working for. Every time you repeat them, you are training yourself to keep on working hard.

Doing something to make yourself happy. The key to making changes is that you should find the power within yourself.

You will do it because you want it, not because of your parents, teachers or someone else.

Making mistakes doesn't mean you are a loser. Making mistakes is a part of the learning.

It may take some tries to reach your goals. But that's OK. It's normal to give up a few times when you try to make a change. Just remember everyone makes mistakes.

21. The underlined word "feasible" means in Chinese.

A.困难的 B.可行的 C.远大的 D.痛苦的

22. What does the underlined word "it " in Paragraph 5 refer to(指的是)?

A. making changes B. pleasing others C. feeling unhappy D. protecting the environment

23. Why does it take time for a change to turn into a habit?

A. Because the goal isn't very clear.

B. Because your parents want you to make the change.

C. Because you will make mistakes when you are learning.

D. Because it takes some time for your brain to get used to the change.

24. The passage mainly talks about _____.

A. how to make friends B. how to set and reach goals

C. how to make a change D. how to have good habits
