One minute, they're playing; the next minute they're sleeping. Their behavior (行为) makes us say, "Aww!" But 29? Maybe because we like it when animals behave like me do.

And of course, don't forget, THE 30! Puppies and kittens can melt (融化) our hearts when they look at us with their big eyes.

It's funny, isn't it? Babies can't do anything but eat, cry, and stop us from sleeping at night. But we think they're very cute, and we want to do everything for them!

OK, so babies look cute with their fat legs and arms and their big round eyes. But it's not only how they look that makes them cute. It's also the things they do.

When babies learn to speak and walk, we find them cute. This is partly because they make mistakes. They say the wrong word or say a word in a funny way. Think of a little baby learning to walk - lots and lots of mistakes!

But mistakes aren't always cute. Think about it. You ask a friend to dinner. He gets food on his face and orange juice on your kitchen table. You're not happy. But a baby does the same thing, and you think it's cute.

Babies' mistakes are cute because they are young and helpless. We humans know our babies can't survive without our help.

Like all living things, babies grow up - they get bigger! Do they stop being cute? Maybe a little. But kids, adults (成年人), and much older adults can still be cute.

Small children often play at being adults - they dress up in adults' clothes or put on makeup or do adult things, like "being a doctor" or "teaching school".

Parents can be cute, too. When we see the love between a parent and child, our mind tells us, that's cute!

And then there are cute old people. What makes them cute? Often, it's their behavior. Older people sometimes do funny things. They are like young people. They show that they're in love, they start new sports, or they like to use modern things like computers or smartphones.

Older people are also cute because they are a little like babies. They can be innocent, and they often need more help than younger people. Again, something in our mind tells us to protect them.

34. Why do people think babies are cute?

- A. Because they can speak clearly and walk fast.
- B. Because they have lovely looks and helpless behaviors.
- C. Because they can survive without any help.
- D. Because they often get food on their faces and arms.

35. What example does the writer give to show that older people can be cute?

- A. Older people always stay at home and watch TV.
- B. Older people do funny things like showing love or starting new sports.
- C. Older people often help young people with their problems.
- D. Older people usually read a lot of books in their free time.

36. What does the underlined word "innocent" in the last paragraph probably mean?

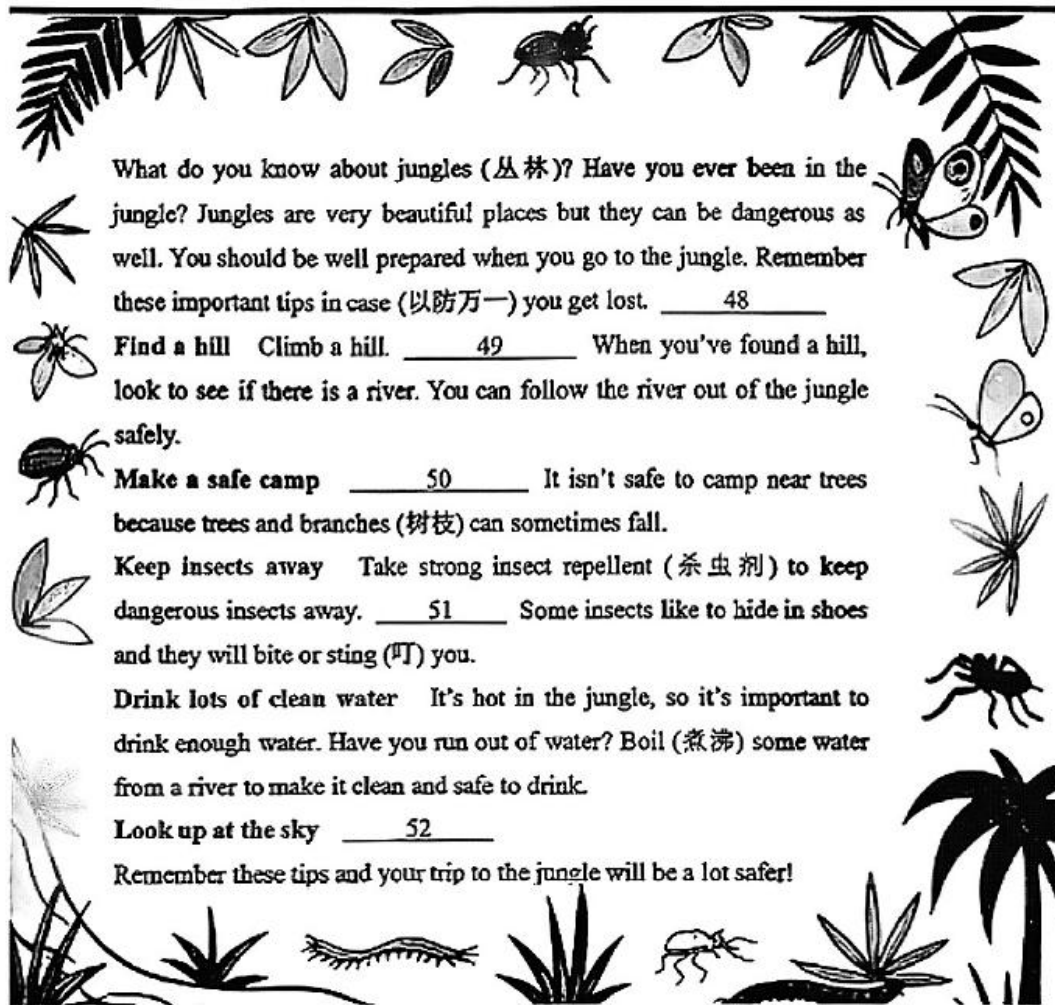

- A. Behaving like an adult.
- B. Having qualities of a child.
- C. Being very tall and strong.
- D. Never making mistakes.

37. What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. Babies are the cutest living things in the world.
- B. People should take care of babies and children.
- C. People of all ages can be cute in their own ways.
- D. Adults should learn from babies and older people.

七、阅读表达（共3小题;每小题2分,满分6分）

请认真阅读短文,用英语回答短文后的问题,并将答案写在答题卷标有题号的横线上。

You're standing next to a road. You hear a car. You know it's coming from the left because the sound gets to your left ear first.

Do all animals hear in the same way? Bats hear with their ears, but they also send out a high sound with their mouth or nose. When this sound hits something, echoes come back. The bat now knows where the thing is and how big it is. We call this echolocation（回声定位）.

Snakes don't have ears, and they can't hear. So how does a snake know when an animal is walking near it? It can feel the ground moving. So if you are in snake country, don't walk quietly. When a snake knows something as big as a person is near, it usually goes away. If it doesn't hear you coming, you may walk on it. And it doesn't like that!

So bats, and some people, can "see" because they hear. And snakes can "hear" because they feel. Can some people hear things we usually see?

Yes! Some people can hear colours! When they listen to music, the different notes have different colours.

Franz Liszt（1811 - 1886）was the best piano player of his time. He also wrote music and was an orchestra conductor（指挥家）.The musicians didn't understand when he said things like, "Please, play this a little more blue. This music has to be blue. Not so pink, please."

At first they thought this was funny. Then they understood that when Liszt heard music, he also saw colours.

83. What can a bat know from the echoes?

84. How do snakes know when danger is near?

85. If you could "hear" colours, which colour would sound special to you? Why?

_____ would sound special to me because _____

八、书面表达

When I shared my favorite book with my friend

Last winter, I shared my favorite book, The Little Prince, with my best friend Li Hua. She had been feeling sad because of a failed exam, so I lent her the book, hoping it would cheer her up. A week later, she returned it with a big smile and said, "The story touched my heart. Thank you!" We spent the whole afternoon discussing the book, and her happiness made me feel warm inside.

This experience taught me that sharing is more than giving — it connects hearts. Whether it's a book, a song, or even a small snack, sharing turns ordinary moments into special memories. As the saying goes, "Happiness grows when shared." I'll keep passing on joy because the more we share, the warmer the world becomes.
